

KNOWING WORTH

DIAMOND DROP

Affirmations

IDENTITY

You are God's creation—handcrafted by the Creator of the earth.
Intentionally made, fearfully and wonderfully formed.

But... why do so many women struggle to believe this?

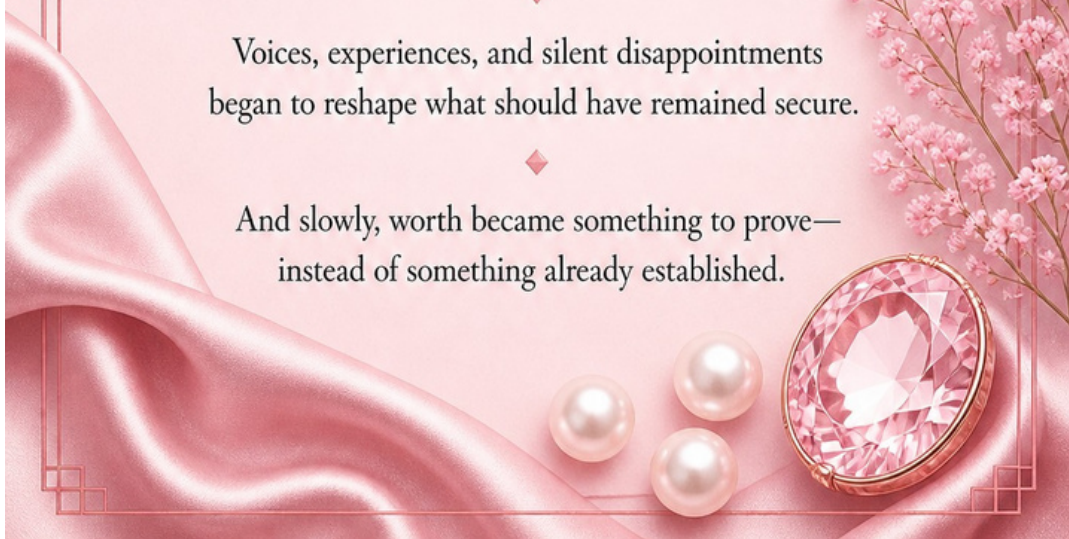

Somewhere along the way,
what was always true became questioned.

Voices, experiences, and silent disappointments began to reshape what should have remained secure.

And slowly, worth became something to prove—instead of something already established.

SELF-IMAGE

See Yourself Clearly

Self-image is not just what you see in the mirror—
it's what you believe about yourself when no one is watching.

Many women are not struggling with worth—they're struggling with what they've been taught to believe about it.

Comparison will distort you.
Rejection will question you.
Silence will make you doubt yourself.

And before you realize it,
you don't like yourself—
comparing yourself to someone else
instead of appreciating who you are.

You are not someone else.
And you are not less than someone else.

Your worth is not something you earn.
It is something you already carry—because you are handcrafted by God,
fearfully and wonderfully made.

TRUTH

Don't Give Your Worth Away

When you don't recognize your worth,
you will place it in the hands of people
or external things
that were never meant to define you.

Your education.
Your skills.
Your career.
Your relationships.
Even your role as a mother or a wife.

All of these have value.
All of these have their place.
But none of these are your worth.

Your worth is not something you achieve.
It is not something you earn.

You are worth—
because God created you.

When you begin to look outside of yourself
to define what God has already established, you will find yourself striving,
instead of resting in truth.

Your worth is not something to negotiate.
It's not something to prove.

It is something to protect.

SIGNATURE

Your worth is to be protected,
honored,
and never apologized for.

CLOSING

You are worth
because God created you.

Nothing you've experienced has the authority to redefine what He has already established.

You don't have to prove your worth.
You don't have to earn it.

It was already decided the moment He created you.

You are fearfully and wonderfully made.
(Psalm 139:14)

You are a crown of beauty,
a diadem in His hand.
(Isaiah 62:3)

Walk in that truth.
Rest in it.
Live from it.

Knowing Worth

Ministry for the Misunderstood

Knowing ^{Worth}

Ministry for the Misunderstood

